

Survey on medicine knowledge of urban residents - China

Following confirmation that some medicine prices were very high in Shangdong Province (China), the survey team at the Center for Health Management and Policy of Shangdong University conducted a survey on medicines knowledge of urban residents in Jinan. Those surveyed generally preferred buying medicines at private pharmacies because they were conveniently located and prices were often cheaper than in public health centres. Click here to read more